

FRENCH POLYNESIA

GAMBIER ARCHIPELAGO

POPPING & JIGGING EXPEDITION

Fishing at the end of the world, the way it should be.

7 NIGHTS · 6 FISHING DAYS

THE EDGE OF THE PACIFIC

About 1,700 km southeast of Tahiti, at the far end of French Polynesia, the Gambier Islands rise from the open ocean. Green volcanic peaks sit inside a huge turquoise lagoon, ringed by a barrier reef and scattered motu.

Few visitors come here. The main island, Mangareva, is home to black-pearl farms, old coral-stone churches and a quiet village pace. The waters around it see almost no fishing pressure.

WHY THE FISH ARE HERE

The Gambier waters see little commercial fishing, and one reason is ciguatera. This natural toxin builds up in many reef fish here, so local reef fish can't be sold or exported. As a result, the reefs have been left mostly alone, and the fish live longer and grow bigger. For catch-and-release anglers, the reason fishermen stay away is the reason you should come.

BUILT FOR JIGGING & POPPING

The Gambier have what serious anglers look for: steep reef drop-offs, current-swept passes, seamounts and deep blue water close to the reef.

On the shallows and reef edges, giant trevally crash poppers and stickbaits, along with bluefin trevally and other reef predators. Drop a jig down the walls and you're into hard-fighting dogtooth tuna, amberjack and grouper. Offshore, yellowfin tuna and wahoo keep things exciting.

The fish are strong, the scenery is spectacular, and you'll often be the only boat in sight.

TARGET SPECIES

POPPING & STICKBAITING: REEF AND SHALLOWS

- Giant Trevally (GT): The top prize. Powerful and aggressive, they hit surface lures hard over the reef edges and passes.
- Bluefin Trevally: Fast and colorful. They often hunt in packs and will chase poppers right to the boat.
- Bigeye Trevally: They school around passes and drop-offs and are great fun on light popping gear.
- Great Barracuda: They strike surface lures with explosive speed.
- Green Jobfish: A strong snapper of the reef edge that will take both stickbaits and jigs.

OFFSHORE: BLUE WATER

- Yellowfin Tuna: Fast and strong. Taken on jigs, poppers and trolled lures.
- Wahoo: Lightning-fast runs and razor teeth.
- Mahi-Mahi (Dorado): Acrobatic, colorful and always welcome.
- Rainbow Runner: A hard fighter that often shows up around tuna schools.

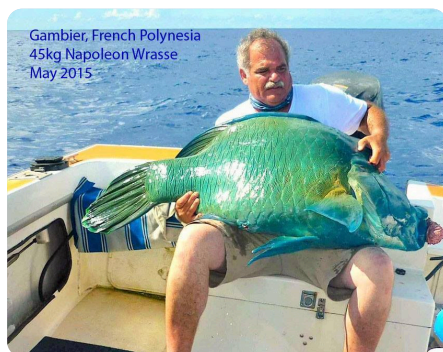

JIGGING: DROP-OFFS AND DEEP REEF

- Dogtooth Tuna: The heavyweight of the reef walls. They hit jigs hard and dive straight for the bottom.
- Amberjack: Brutal, deep-water fighters that test both tackle and angler.
- Red Bass: A tough, territorial reef predator.
- Grouper / Coral Trout: Several species, including lyretail and coral grouper. They grab jigs and head for cover.
- Emperor: Hard-pulling reef fish that take jigs on the deeper reef.

PROTECTED: LOOK, DON'T KEEP

Napoleon Wrasse: A giant of the reef, sometimes seen around the passes and occasionally hooked by accident. It is protected in French Polynesia and must be released right away, with as little handling as possible.

Catch-and-release is encouraged across all reef species. Many reef fish here carry ciguatera and are not safe to eat.

FISHING SEASON

We fish the Gambier from August to May. June and July are too cold for good fishing.

WARM SEASON · NOVEMBER–APRIL

Air 24–27°C · Water 24–27°C

Calmer seas and the best surface action. Peak season for GT on poppers, yellowfin and mahi-mahi.

COOL SEASON · MAY · AUGUST–OCTOBER

Air 21–24°C · Water 22–25°C

Stronger trade winds and southern swells. Excellent jigging for dogtooth tuna, amberjack and grouper on the deep walls. Wahoo are often active.

BEST MONTHS

FEBRUARY–APRIL · OCTOBER–NOVEMBER

THE BOATS

ACCOMMODATION

You'll stay at a family-run guesthouse on Mangareva, where your hosts look after you like family. Rooms are shared by two anglers and have hot showers.

All meals are home-cooked: breakfast before you head out, a packed lunch on the boat, and dinner at the guesthouse each evening.
